

DELAWARE BRIDGES ABOVE TRENTON ARE ALL FREE BUT ONE

Remaining Toll Structure On Upper Part of River at Dingman's Ferry

DISAGREE ON ONE SPAN

First Bridge to Be Purchased and Freed at Morrisville in 1918

During the past 14 years the toll bridges have been eliminated on the length of the upper Delaware River, beyond Trenton, except for the bridge at Dingman's Ferry, 20 miles north of Delaware Water Gap, leading to the little town of Layton, N. J. For this one remaining toll structure there is a disagreement between the owners and the interstate commission as to a fair valuation, but terms may be reached before cold weather, so that the entire 17 toll bridges may be things of the past.

For the purchase of properties and rights, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have expended jointly almost $2,000,000. For strengthening and rebuilding, other large sums have been spent. When residents of the Delaware Valley first agitated a move to have the bridges purchased and freed for travel a strong protest went up from other parts of New Jersey in opposition, but sentiment finally prevailed and perseverance secured duplicate statutes in the two States.

The first bridge to be purchased and freed was that between Trenton and Morrisville, July 12, 1918. In January of the following year the old Point Pleasant-Hyram bridge was taken over to be followed in December, 1919, by the one from Lambertville to New Hope. It was not until August, 1921, that the much-traveled bridge from Phillipsburg to Easton was purchased for the highest bridge figure, $300,000, and the following Spring that at Washington Crossing became public property.

Then followed the bridge at Milford, Pa., April, 1922; Yardley, December, 1922; Kiegelesville suspension bridge, January, 1923; Stockton to Centre Bridge, November, 1925, where only the piers and franchise were purchased for $10,000, the ancient wooden structure having been burned after being hit by lightning; Columbia to Portland, May 1927, Calhoun street bridge in Trenton, November, 1928; Alexandria Bridge at Frenchtown, January, 1929; Milford-Upper Black Eddy, June, 1929; Belvidere, June, 1929; Knowlton Turnpike & Bridge Co. at the town of Delaware, N. J., in 1931, and finally last week the Lumberville-Raven Rock bridge.

One of the most interesting bridges taken over is the one at Delaware, N. J. This was a little-used span until the motor traffic began to the Pocono and Water Gap sections, when its toll collections increased greatly. It is for vehicle traffic only, having no foot path and is only a hundred yards long, but the States paid $275,000 for it last year.

Most of these old bridges replaced fords or ferries. The latter were in use at the time of the Revolution and some of them long before. The first bridge over the Delaware was built at Trenton, then in Hunterdon County, and was finished in February, 1806. It was of wood, covered, and cost $180,000.

The New Jersey Legislature of 1812 passed an act authorizing a bridge from Lambertville to New Hope. This was finished in 1814 and cost $69,000. The statute prescribed toll rates. The charge for every coach, landau, chariot, phaeton or other pleasure-vehicle with four wheels drawn by four horses was 75 cents. If drawn by two horses only 50 cents was charged; wagons with four horses, 63 cents; chaise, riding chair, sulky, cart or other two-wheeled carriage, or sleigh or sled with two horses, 38 cents; the same device with one horse, 25 cents; single horse and rider, 12½ cents; horned cattle, three cents, sheep or swine one cent; every foot passenger, three cents. It was arranged so that a dividend greater than 15 per cent would result in a reduction in these toll charges. For many years it was the custom to charge no toll of persons using the bridge to go to church on Sunday.

In 1841 a great freshet occurred in the Delaware. The bridge at Stockton was swept off its piers and floating down stream, tore away the bridge here. Both bridges were soon rebuilt, of the same wooden, covered type common to the river bridges of those days.

No more trouble was experienced until October, 1903, when the greatest flood known along the Delaware River resulted from heavy up-river rains. This time the Stockton bridge withstood the flood but plank by plank the one here was washed away, seriously hampering affairs between the two towns. Fortunately, the following Winter was a severe one and the river was frozen over most of the time and early the next Summer a new steel bridge with an open top was ready.

While the elements in the shape of flood could be defied by the bridge at Stockton, fire proved its undoing. In

WEEK-END AUTO TOLL

Four persons were killed and 25 injured in a number of week-end motor accidents throughout Pennsylvania, a check-up revealed today.

The heaviest toll was taken in Western Pennsylvania, where two deaths and eleven injuries resulted. Central section reported one fatality and eight injured persons.

"SQUARE DEAL" FOR WALKER

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt intends to give Mayor James J. Walker a "square deal" when the Tammany mayor appears before him Thursday to answer removal charges filed by Mr. Seabury. He will not permit the hearing to be turned into a "bally-hoo" by Walker or Seabury. This was made plain today by persons close to Roosevelt, although the Governor refrained from any discussion of the Walker case. Whether Mayor Walker will be permitted to call witnesses in his defense has not been determined by the Governor.

LIBBY HOLMAN TO SURRENDER TODAY

Winston-Salem, N. C., Aug. 8.—Dark-eyed, dark-haired Libby Holman, who won Broadway with a sob in her voice, and only a month or so ago came to a new home in the South as the bride of Zachary Smith Reynolds, richest boy in the Carolinas, comes back here today charged with murdering her husband. She is due to arrive some time this afternoon, her father, Albert Holman, announced today. According to plans of her counsel, a writ of habeas corpus will be requested and argued.

"DOGGED" BY BAD LUCK

Allentown, Aug. 8.—Bad luck which has dogged Robert Wolfe, 22, former Muhlenburg College athlete and sports writer for the Allentown Morning Call since his freshman year, struck again over the week-end in the form of lightning. Wolfe was burned on the left leg by a bolt that brushed him as he took refuge in a pavilion during a storm which broke while he was reporting a baseball game at Jordan Park. He is in Allentown Hospital painfully, if not critically injured. During his career at Muhlenburg, Wolfe broke both arms playing baseball, broke them again playing football and fractured his skull. As a result of the skull fracture he suffered amnesia this summer and was missing for several days.

SEEK SLAIN MAN'S FRIEND

Cape May Court House, N. J., Aug. 8.—New Jersey authorities today were searching for a Camden man believed to be a love rival of Alvin H. Ferguson, 55, who was found murdered on the Old Shun Pike, 12 miles south of here yesterday. The top of Ferguson's head was blown off, apparently by the shot gun which was found clutched in his arm. He was a former resident of York, Pa. Reports that Ferguson had quarreled violently with the Camden man Thursday over the affections of a Cape May woman, and the fact that the death was obviously made to appear as a suicide, led police to take steps toward apprehension of the former.

LEAVES "WATER WHEEL" TEA ROOM TO BROTHERS

E. MULHOLLAND WILL

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 8.—The "Water Wheel," one of the most original and picturesque tea rooms on the Lackawanna Trail, with its collection of antiques, quaint furnishings and patronage, was bequeathed to two brothers at Dyerstown by Lewis Walter Castle, it was revealed today when his will was probated in the Register of Wills office here.

Mr. Castle, who was identified with cinema and studio life in Hollywood, formerly worked on the "lots" with such noted screen celebrities as Ramon Navarro before coming East and locating here. For the past few years he owned and managed the "Water Wheel," an old Colonial mill which was transformed into a tea room at Dyerstown.

The testator, who died July 8th, named Frederick Augustus Labs as executor. Another brother, Robert G. Labs will share the real estate valued at $2,000. The sum of $100 was placed in a trust fund in the Doylestown Trust Company, with the provision that the interest of the amount pay for the care of his grave. According to the will, Frederick Labs will inherit one-third of the real estate, while his brother, Robert, will receive the business.

BUCKS INVENTOR STAGES A MOST UNUSUAL FEAT

Believed to Have Made First Wireless Telephone Communication Minus Tubes

TALKS FOR 30 MINUTES

What the inventor believes to be the first wireless telephone communication without tubes in transmission and reception, took place in Buckingham township a few days ago, it was revealed today, when Walter Beans, 40, proprietor of a roadside restaurant along the Lackawanna Trail, north of Doylestown, invited a news service representative to his home.

Beans was formerly a mail carrier in Doylestown, who worked on extra duty, but for the past five years he has been burning the midnight oil studying wireless telephone and telegraphic science in all its details.

"I may get nothing out of this discovery, but I believe it can be developed to such an extent that it will be a great benefit to the world in general," Beans told his interviewer.

Beans also stated that he believed that he could show science the cause of the fluctuation of the magnetic needle as a result of extensive experiments which were successfully terminated on March 9, this year, at his home, a discovery which led up to the wireless telephone communication without tubes on Thursday of last week.

Beans, in the presence of several witnesses, including a notary public, talked over his home-made tubeless and wireless telephone for thirty minutes over a distance of more than 100 feet, with a head set and mouth piece in one building and a similar set-up in another building some distance away.

"The conversation was just as plain as if both persons were talking in the same room," Mr. Beans declared. "It is exactly the same invention upon which Marconi has been working for some time with some degree of success."

Mr. Beans says that he is confident that the wireless telephone without tubes, can be developed so that it can be used internationally.

"It is simply a matter of finance, of getting money sufficient to build larger apparatus to do the work," he said. "I do not have the means to build a larger layout but I might be able to attract the attention of engineers or research departments of engineering companies for expansion."

Beans' set was operated last week on a six-volt battery. Practically all of the parts were made by the inventor, who has spent night after night experimenting.

"This is not the result of luck, but the result of long and extensive study, research and experimentation," he declared.

To avoid any infraction on his discoveries, Beans immediately dismantled the most intricate parts of the mechanism after the experiment had been successfully carried out in the presence of witnesses.

Beans is of the opinion that the time is here when wireless, tubeless telephone systems can be installed, with a central exchange operated in the same manner as at the present time, but without wires and tubes. Development and establishment of this science will save an enormous operating cost, Mr. Beans declares.

"My greatest trouble has been to make people really believe that I have successfully completed experiments

TWO SEVERE STORMS VISIT THIS SECTION

Colored Man Killed Saturday
Afternoon at Penn
Valley

Two short but severe electrical storms struck this section over the week-end. The first one occurred Saturday afternoon and resulted in the death of a colored man at Penn Valley. The second storm broke at about the same hour yesterday afternoon. Telephone and light services were interrupted.

The storm yesterday afternoon struck the pole at Bath and Millin streets and for a time those residing in the vicinity thought the entire section was ablaze. Tongues of flames leaped into the air, wires were cut in two and fell to the grounds.

The pole carries a heavy load of wires into the sub-station at Linden street and the lightning hit the heavily charged lines. There was a "hissing" sound and then loud crackling noises. Repair crews were summoned and had service restored in a reasonable time.

Saturday afternoon a heavy down-pour was accompanied by sharp lightning following a torrid afternoon.

The victim of lightning was Thomas Perry, Negro, 48 years old, of Tyburn Road, Penn Valley, near Morrisville. He had been picking cherries a short distance from his home and was returning when overtaken by the storm. A bolt of lightning struck and killed him instantly.

His body was found lying near the roadway by his sister, Mary, who, alarmed by his absence had started out to search for him. She was aided by Corporal Stewart and Trooper Herman of the Morrisville State Police.

Perry, a son of the late Thomas and Mary Perry, is survived by four brothers, Harry, Abraham, Robert and Louis, and two sisters, Mary, and Margaret Williams, of Lambertville.

Four Philadelphians Hurt When Automobiles Collide

A Philadelphia man, his wife and two daughters were injured last evening at about 9.30 when their automobile and that of another Philadelphian collided on State Road at Chamberlain Lane, Torresdale Manor, and the car of the former was hurled against a post.

The injured who were treated at Harriman Hospital are: James Higgins, 2144 Tucker street, Philadelphia, contused wound of nose requiring two stitches, contusions of right knee and left elbow; his wife, Nellie Higgins, contusions of forehead, in which two stitches were taken, abrasions of right knee and sprained hand; their daughter of two years, contusions of the body; and another daughter, Mrs. Anna May Hart, 1346 Ellsworth street, Philadelphia, severely sprained side.

The driver of the second car, Albert Upton, 3411 Wellington street, Philadelphia, was unhurt. Upton, who was driving the smaller car of the two, was operating his machine toward Bristol, while the Higgins were traveling toward Philadelphia, when the crash occurred.

REV. RONGE OFFICIATES AT WEDDING OF SISTER

Miss Gertrude Ronge Becomes Bride of James A.
Whitcomb

FORTNIGHT AT SHORE

The wedding of Miss Gertrude Ronge, Germantown, and James A. Whitcomb, Boston, Mass., and Newark, N. J., took place on Saturday morning at 9.30 a. m. in Zion Lutheran Church, Wood street and Jefferson avenue, with the bride's brother, Rev. Paul Ronge, pastor of the parish, officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ronge, Danville, attended the young couple and their daughter, Little Pauline Ronge, was the flower girl.

A poudre blue lace ensemble, made on long slim lines, with a medium-sized matching felt hat, and tan toned suede gloves, and kid slippers comprised the bride's costume. Her flowers were pale pink roses.

Mrs. Ronge, Mrs. Whitcomb's attendant, wore a frock of henna hued flat crepe embroidered in tan and made ensemble fashion. Her accessories of hat and slippers were tan in tone.

The little flower girl was daintily dressed in cream colored silk, with a picture hat of hemp straw, white slippers and anklets and she carried pink rosebuds.

Following the ceremony, the happy couple left for a fortnight's honeymoon in Atlantic City, N. J.

Mrs. Whitcomb for several years a resident here has been employed as a teacher of English in the Brown School, Cheltenham.

Mr. Whitcomb is also well known here having made his residence for some time with Dr. and Mrs. Walter Smith.

SEEK MURDER MOTIVE

New York City, Aug. 8.—A particularly cruel murder uncovered here today furnished police with another mystery crime problem, apparently involving the underworld and a Broadway character.

The brutally stabbed and strangled body of an unidentified man, trussed into a burlap sack, intricately tied, was found in the street of a desolate section of Brooklyn today. Eight or ten times, an ice pick apparently had been plunged into the body and judging from marks on the neck, the person had been strangled with wire. The body was trussed up with coils of rope.

INVESTIGATE GIRL'S DEATH

Absecon, N. J., Aug. 8.—The possibility that Florence Price, 15, whose body was found on the floor of her home, two doors from police headquarters, had been slain during a criminal attack, was being investigated today by police. The girl was discovered, lifeless, by her 11 year old brother, Newton, who notified a brother-in-law, Hans Corte, 35, a contractor. Police, who were summoned by Corte took the girl to the Atlantic City hospital where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

KEYSTONE CLUB BACKS NEW ROAD AS A NECESSITY

Sees Great need for New Highway Through Bensalem Township

A VITAL IMPROVEMENT

"Opponents of Thoroughfare
Actuated by Selfish Motives"

Officials of the Keystone Automobile Club have elaborated upon the statement first issued in which they endorsed the proposed new highway, leading from the Roosevelt Boulevard, through Bensalem Township to Yardley and connecting with the four-lane route recently constructed through New Jersey to the Hudson tunnel.

The Keystone Association goes on record as being in favor of the project and J. Maxwell Smith, general manager of the Club, today declared the proposed road was a "necessity" for the accommodation of a vast number of motor vehicles traveling between Philadelphia, Trenton and New York.

In commenting on the threatened court action of Bucks County citizens to prevent the construction of the road, the statement read:

"The proposed new highway is in line with modern, attractive highways, built to serve the needs of the greatest number in short distances between centers of population. The contemplated improvement is vital to the interests of motorists in Philadelphia, Delaware, Bucks and Montgomery counties. Of all motor projects in Eastern Pennsylvania, we consider this to be the most important at this time," said Mr. Smith.

"Opponents of the highway are actuated by understandable but selfish motives, they want to block the improvement because it will interfere with the business of hot dog stands and other small business places which line the old road, with its dangerous curves and holes, so motorists could continue to patronize these wayside establishments."

"We believe it is timely to call to the attention of those objectors that state highways are built with funds contributed by motorists, and states are duty bound to construct roads for accommodation of the motoring public. Wherever local interests conflict with this attitude, they should be disregarded. The motor vehicle registration of Bucks, Montgomery and Delaware counties exceeds 370,000. Owners of these motor vehicles have contributed handsomely to state highway projects. We think it is evident that their interest overshadows the residents of Bensalem Township," concluded the statement.

To the argument that the present highway can be widened and improved at a cost much less than the construction of a new highway, Smith said it has been demonstrated by engineers that a satisfactory, modern highway cannot be constructed on the line of the old one.

PROSPERITY YANE

New England, where the depression has been most prolonged because of the pre-depression removal of many of her textile mills to the South, reports renewed industrial activity impressive in its proportions. Because of the number and size of the plants affected, the news from New England is of more than ordinary interest to the country.

Two large woolen mills in Pittsfield, Mass., are operating at capacity, one 24 hours a day, and a third will summon its entire force back to work within two weeks. A woolen mill at Lawrence, Mass., has given employment to 2,000 workers, while an equal number has returned to work in a blanket mill in Lowell, N. H. From several textile centers in Rhode Island and Connecticut comes good news of the same sort.

This is not the death knell of the depression but it may be the herald angels singing. Though the number given work in New England could hardly be called more than a haze in a great drought, it may be the forerunner of an industrial revival throughout the country. Things cannot improve Down East and in the hog belt without some of the milk and honey slopping over into the other states and sections.

Start up a few wheels and boilers in scattered sections of the country and give the farmers enough profit for a new hoe and there will be a rebirth of confidence in this land from which confidence and courage fled in 1929. It doesn't take much of an impetus to start that old American psychology working either way.

STEEL MEN OPTIMISTIC

Though steel production has been at the lowest in the history of the present large steel corporations, the industry's future is encouraging. The very fact that it has been at a point where it could not go much lower places it in a position for advancement.

Leaders in the industry apparently anticipate early gains. The United States Corporation would not have paid a dividend on its preferred stock for the last quarter had it not felt confident of a business upturn during the next quarter. Had the prospects been hopeless there certainly would have been no dividend last quarter.

Reports from the steel centers are encouraging. The Pittsburgh district is optimistic, with five large mills either resuming operations or increasing their production. The adjusted index of steel mill operations rose last week from 19.8 to 21.2, and the rate of ingot production advanced slightly to 16.5 per cent of capacity.

The United States Steel Corporation is not acting in the dark. Its directorate covers the whole field of manufactures and finance, giving it a composite view of the future based on other factors than present industrial operations.

We disagree with the fellow who says neither platform helps the office worker. The Democratic wet plank promises to restore the beer's white collar.

'MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY'

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COWICI-FRIEDE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Following the receipt of a death threat, Lola Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady", is mysteriously slain in her penthouse apartment at 3 a. m. New Year's. Dr. Hugh Baldwin reports death due to heart failure. The only clue to the murderer is a medical laboratory specimen box outside Lola's window. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt attaches importance to the young man whose photograph is found in Lola's room, and whose identity Lola had refused to reveal beyond his first name, "Basil". At the mention of "Basil", Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, becomes hysterical. It is known that Lola quarreled with Guy Everett and Vincent Rowland, a lawyer, over investments. Eunice, the maid, confessed she was employed by Everett to report the goings on in the apartment. The mystery deepens with the finding of the body of Christine Quires, Lola's guest. Christine had been killed before Lola and her body hidden until an opportune moment arrived for the murderer to place it, soaking wet, in Lola's room. The findings are similar to those in Lola's case except that Christine's neck was bruised after death. Everett, Christine's last escort, claims he left her at the apartment elevator at midnight New Year's Eve, and then went for a ride on the Motor Parkway, alone, arriving home after 3 a. m. Mrs. Carewe informs Colt that Christine lived with a brother, Edgar, in Rochester, and was to receive her inheritance shortly. Lola's room is vacuum cleaned and the dust particles sent to Professor Luckner for analysis. Colt sends to the medical examiner a hypodermic syringe taken from Baldwin's bag and a strap for analysis, also a strand of Christine's hair found near Lola's window. The Commissioner orders Basil's picture telephoned to M. Dupont, head of the Paris Police. It is learned that Edward Quires received a telegram New Year's Eve and left for New York. Paper and ink identical with the death threat materials are found under Eunice's mattress. Everett's Motor Parkway alibi is shattered.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

IN the bleak light that began to filter through Colt's study, we looked at each other in wonderment. Where were we going? The established fact that Guy Everett had lied, and about such an important matter, did seem significant. But Colt was not ready to discuss the case. Instead he thoughtfully consulted his watch, while he told me that Gavin had phoned; the portrait of Basil was being cabled by telephoto three thousand miles to France.

It was now five o'clock in the morning of the new year's first day. "Ten o'clock in Paris," the chief reflected aloud. "Monsieur le Préfet must certainly be at his office."

And such is the service which the Bell Telephone Company puts at the disposal of all police officials that in five minutes Thatcher Colt and M. Dupont, Préfet of the Parisian Sûreté, were talking on the telephone—with myself taking notes on an extension.

"Hello—"

"Allo—"

"Monsieur Dupont?"

"Mais oui. Qui est là?"

"Thatcher Colt."

"Ah, Monsieur Colt, mon cher ami! Comment allez-vous?"

"C'est la même petite vie, Monsieur Dupont, et vous?"

"Ah, c'est la même chose, Monsieur Colt. Can I help you?"

Here the Paris police chief switched suddenly to English out of compliment to his transatlantic confère and much to my relief.

"I am tracing the history of a woman—and a man," explained Colt. "First I want all the facts that you can get about the life in Paris or anywhere else of a woman now living here under the name of Lola Carewe, also known as Rosita George."

"Ah, oui!" And M. Dupont spelled out the names carefully.

"Will you also see if the Roumanian police have a history of a man supposed to be her father—Jorga, for a long time a political exile in London."

"I will do that, too, mon cher ami! Anything else?"

"Much more," chuckled Thatcher Colt and went on to explain how the portrait of a young man, first name Basil, family name unknown, was being forwarded to the Préfet by telephoto. M. Dupont gasped. Such impatient persons, these Americans!

"And what I am most earnestly hoping you will see your way clear to do," pursued Colt warmly, "is to have one of your agents call on one Marcel Grandon, 60, Avenue D'Iena—in the Etoile district. I assume—show him the telephoto portrait and try to get it identified. Perhaps your people may know him—it is barely possible the young man has a police record."

"We will do our best, Mr. Colt!" "Angels could do no more, M. Dupont! A thousand thanks!"

"Pas du tout, Monsieur Colt." "Au revoir."

"Au revoir."

As he hung up the receiver, Colt cast a rogue's grin at Dougherty.

"We're getting nearer to something," he said, "with our picture of Basil!"

"Smart as a whip and all that," granted Dougherty, "but I still don't see his connection with this case."

"We'll debate that presently," promised Colt. "Meanwhile, Tony, will you please now arouse Mr. Vincent Rowland from his innocent slumbers and tell him I would like to speak to him on the telephone?"

In this announcement Dougherty displayed a lively interest.

"I was much surprised, Thatcher," he revealed, "when you put a tail on Rowland. Surely you don't suspect that old chin-whisker of anything serious?"

Having relighted his pipe, Colt replied:

"I do regard the eminent Mr. Rowland with a somewhat jaundiced eye, Dougherty. Truth is, I was watching him in the Mayfair dining-room last night, just before Lola sent us her note, inviting us into this singular business. He didn't wish Lola to write that note. I watched him trying to dissuade her. I don't know whether I ever told you or not, but in my youth I mastered lip-reading. I can listen to distant conversations by watching mouths. I saw him implore her to have nothing to do with me in this matter. Perhaps he feared having his name mixed up in a police case. Quite reasonably, too. Yet when we went over, he took the credit for inviting us."

"By George!" glowered Dougherty. "That is curious!"

"Mr. Rowland is on the telephone," I announced.

"Forgive me, Mr. Rowland," began Colt urbanely. "I am sorry to break into your sleep. But there are one or two points the police have to clear up. What's that? Oh, there is no doubt about it now—plain, unadulterated murder. Yes! Well, it's very kind of you to be ready to help. I want to ask you two questions. Once, when you and I were talking in Miss Carewe's living-room last night, you started to tell me something that sounded significant. You said, 'There is one curious circumstance which, maybe, I shouldn't tell—' Remember that? No, you didn't finish it—Miss Carewe interrupted us."

At the other end of the wire, Vincent Rowland was hemming nervously.

"I can't imagine what that was," he protested. "Let me think."

"I don't want to bring you downtown at this late hour," hinted Thatcher Colt. "But it is so important—"

"I remember now—perfectly!" crowed Vincent Rowland. "I don't think it amounts to anything much at all. But for whatever it is worth, here it is. I have repeatedly warned Lola against her association with an actor named Guy Everett. In the first place I don't think the fellow is altogether sane. In the second place he was foolish enough to take Lola's advice on investments, and he lost his savings—every dollar he had in the world. In the third place he wanted to marry her, and she didn't care a fig for him—not a fig! He was jealous of all her friends, including such a harmless one as myself. He blamed Christine Quires for turning Lola against him—he told me so. And he was especially jealous of Doctor Baldwin. I just thought that Guy Everett would bear watching—that's all."

"And you couldn't remember what it was you had meant to tell me," chided Colt sarcastically.

"I'm a sleepy and tired old man," fretted Rowland. "Now is there anything else, Mr. Colt?"

There was a moment of silence, before Colt propounded the next question.

"Mr. Rowland—why did you and Lola quarrel before you left the apartment this evening?"

"Quarrel?"

The word was repeated like a squeal.

"Quarrel!" squeaked Vincent Rowland for a second time. "We did not quarrel. We had a few words, yes—anyone who stays around Lola Carewe very long will have words with her. She is—as a high-tempered and tempestuous character, Mr. Colt. But we had no quarrel—we went out on a party together!"

"Well, what did you have words about?"

"About Guy Everett—and who else? I told her she was a fool to be advising men in their investments. She has friends in some investment company downtown and sends them customers. I told her it was a dangerous game. I believe the Federal Government is going to send her friends to Atlanta—but I am sure Lola thinks—thought—they are all right. And I warned her that Guy Everett was a ruined man and might try to strike back. And she told me to mind my own damned business—which I wish I had!"

"What is the name of this company to which she sends her wealthy friends for investment?"

"The Rock-Ribbed Securities Corporation."

"Thanks, Mr. Rowland. I will see you later in the day!"

"Is that so?" groaned Vincent Rowland, as he hung up his receiver.

"That all sounds convincing enough," remarked Colt and Dougherty nodded sagely. He was about to continue when Colt reached for the telephone. This time it was to instruct Flynn about looking up the Rock-Ribbed Securities Corporation. This conversation finished, the chief sat back silently and lit his pipe.

I knew that the time had come to examine the evidence. But only a brief review was possible in Colt's present mood; there was too much yet to be learned.

"Get out your notebook, Tony," requested the chief, "and take down our discussion during the next five minutes."

"At last we are going to find out just where we are at!" rejoiced Dougherty with an owlish stare of his blue eyes. The District Attorney set down an empty glass, ran a big hand through his red curls and cleared his enormous throat impressively.

"I am inclined to believe, Thatcher, that you are ignoring the obvious in this case—looking for subtleties that do not exist. It is all much simpler than you make out!"

Colt smiled amiably and entertained the District Attorney to state his conclusions.

HUNDREDS SEE BEARDED IX. WIN AT HULMEVILLE

HULMEVILLE, Aug. 8.—"Joe" Kohler pitched a beautiful game against the Colored House of David, Saturday, and was only beaten by errors in the last two innings. He struck out five and allowed but six hits; while Hulmeville was garnering eight hits off the slants from J. Clark.

The game was close and clean all the way through, and was as fast as any seen in this section for some time. Jackson on first base was clever, both with the shovel he used for a glove and the toe of his big right foot that could touch the sack like that of a dancer.

The local team showed lack of awe when Rockhill with two hits and Foster with three hits aroused the crowd. The play of the locals till the eighth inning was good; then the boys did terrible things with the ball and lost the game.

One of the largest crowds ever seen here was on hand, estimated at 1200.

ODD FELLOWS LOSE TO KENSINGTON NINE

The Bristol Odd Fellows lost to the Kensington Odd Fellows, 8-3 at the Odd Fellows outing at Willow Grove Park Saturday afternoon. The Bristol organization was defending the championship honors they won last year.

Turner Ashby hurled for the local club and pitched the kind of ball that usually wins ball games. His mates hit the ball hard but when it became necessary for a hit to be made to drive in runs, the Bristol batters were dismal failures.

Errors also added the Kensington club to chalk up the victory. In the first inning the winners scored four times on but one hit.

Chappy twirled wonderful ball for the winners and kept the Bristol hits well scattered.

Bruce and Hibbs led the Bristol hitters while Home led the Kensington batters.

THIRD WARD A. C. EASILY DEFEATS WEST BRISTOL

Third Ward A. C. of the Bristol Twilight League had no trouble in downing the West Bristol A. C. yesterday afternoon on the latter's field. The final score was 16-6.

The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of Manager Cliff Bills who clouted out two home runs for the Warders. Massilla and McGinley had three hits each.

"Eddie" Lavenberg was on the hill for the winners and served in fine style. He allowed seven hits and struck out ten batters.

"Gunner" Corrigan featured in the field with two circus catches.

Bucks Inventor Stages A Most Unusual Feast

and inventions that are really worthwhile," Mr. Beas declared. "Many people say, just because I live out here in the country and operate a roadside stand, that 'he knows nothing about the science of wireless telephone and telegraph.'"

Mr. Beas has several inventions, upon which he has been working for some time. Although the nature of the new ideas were not made public, he says that he is certain that he has something that will benefit the chemical field, the textile industry and the Army and Navy.

Delaware Bridges Above Trenton, Free, Except One

July, 1923, during a severe electrical storm, the bridge was struck. The dry interior and accumulated dust and straw on the flooring made it a quick prey to the flames, the span on the Jersey side collapsing in the river while a number of the Stockton firemen were still on it fighting the flames. Luckily, they were all rescued from the fire and water.

With the exception of one span, the bridge taken over last week between Lumberville and Raven Rock is the old covered type now becoming so rare. During the 1903 freshet one span was destroyed and was replaced by open steel work.

Perhaps the most notable event involving the bridges on the Delaware will be the erection of the long-talked-of memorial bridge at Washington Crossing. With Federal aid, it is believed this will be made a worthy structure, and the highway departments of both New Jersey and Pennsylvania have been considering this in their road programs for the past few years.

$1, were cut out of the will of their mother, Eliza Mulholland, of Bristol, who died June 29, and three other children were bequeathed the estate valued at $1800. It was disclosed when her will was filed.

For various reasons Thomas, Robert and John Mulholland and Teresa Waters were disinherited, but Mary, James and Agnes Mulholland were designated as heirs. The Farmers National Bank and Trust Company of Bucks County was appointed executor. The instrument was made in 1928.

Written by his own hand and rather elaborately designed, the will of William H. Cole, of Newtown, named a son and daughter as the sole heirs of his estate valued at close to $3,000. One-half of the real estate and "the things on the place" will be given to the son, Walter. Mr. Cole died April 19th.

Mrs. Emma Davis will receive the one hundred-acre farm and $5,000 estate which formerly belonged to her husband, D'Arcy M. Davis, according to his will. Mr. Davis, who died May 14, directed that his widow serve as executrix. The farm is located in Warwick township.

Inventories were filed in the following estates: Estate of Helen Kirk Acosta, Doylestown, $3175.50; estate of George Scott, Bristol, $1500; estate of Maria Kline, Richland, $3165; estate of Annie P. Croman, Quakertown, $142.79; estate of Sadie Sichel, Doylestown, $2610.96, and estate of Elizabeth Miller, Perkasie, $1063.45.

Letters of administration were granted to William K. Krout in the estate of Charles Krout, Perkasie. In the estate of Martha Marschner, Bristol, Ernest Marschner was granted the letters of administration amounting to $750. Cecilia Marion was granted the letters of administration in the estate of John Marion, Bristol, amounting to $400. In the estate of Maria Kline, Richlandtown, Milton B. Kline was granted the letters of administration, amounting to $50. In the estate of Frank Heater, letters of administration amounting to $500 were granted to Catherine G. Heater.

Facing the "Fargo Express"

By HARDIN BURNLEY

A REAL CHAMP!

--CANZONERI!
DOESN'T FIGHT
SET-UPS, AND HAS NEVER DODGED ANY-ONE!

© 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

At the present time Fisticans can boast of but ONE ring champion who has proved himself worthy of the name. Yes, I mean Tony Canzoneri of Brooklyn and New Orleans, the doughty little fighting man who now wears the mantle of Gans, Lavigne and Leonard. While Tony may not measure up to the stature of his marvelous predecessors, he has certainly shown himself to be a genuine champion and a real fighter—one who FIGHTS and doesn't stall, who has never dodged a challenger, and who provides thrills galore almost every time he climbs through the ropes. I don't believe he has ever participated in an actually dull bout.

It is typical of Canzoneri that he has insisted upon defending his title against the man who has been ballyhooed as the greatest fighter for his weight and inches in the game today—Billy Petrolle, the famed "Fargo Express." After

Tony had whipped Kid Chocolate, he and Manager Sammy Goldman conferred with Madison Square officials about his next title bout, and when the question of who was to be his opponent was broached, all that Tony would say was, "Get Petrolle for me next!"

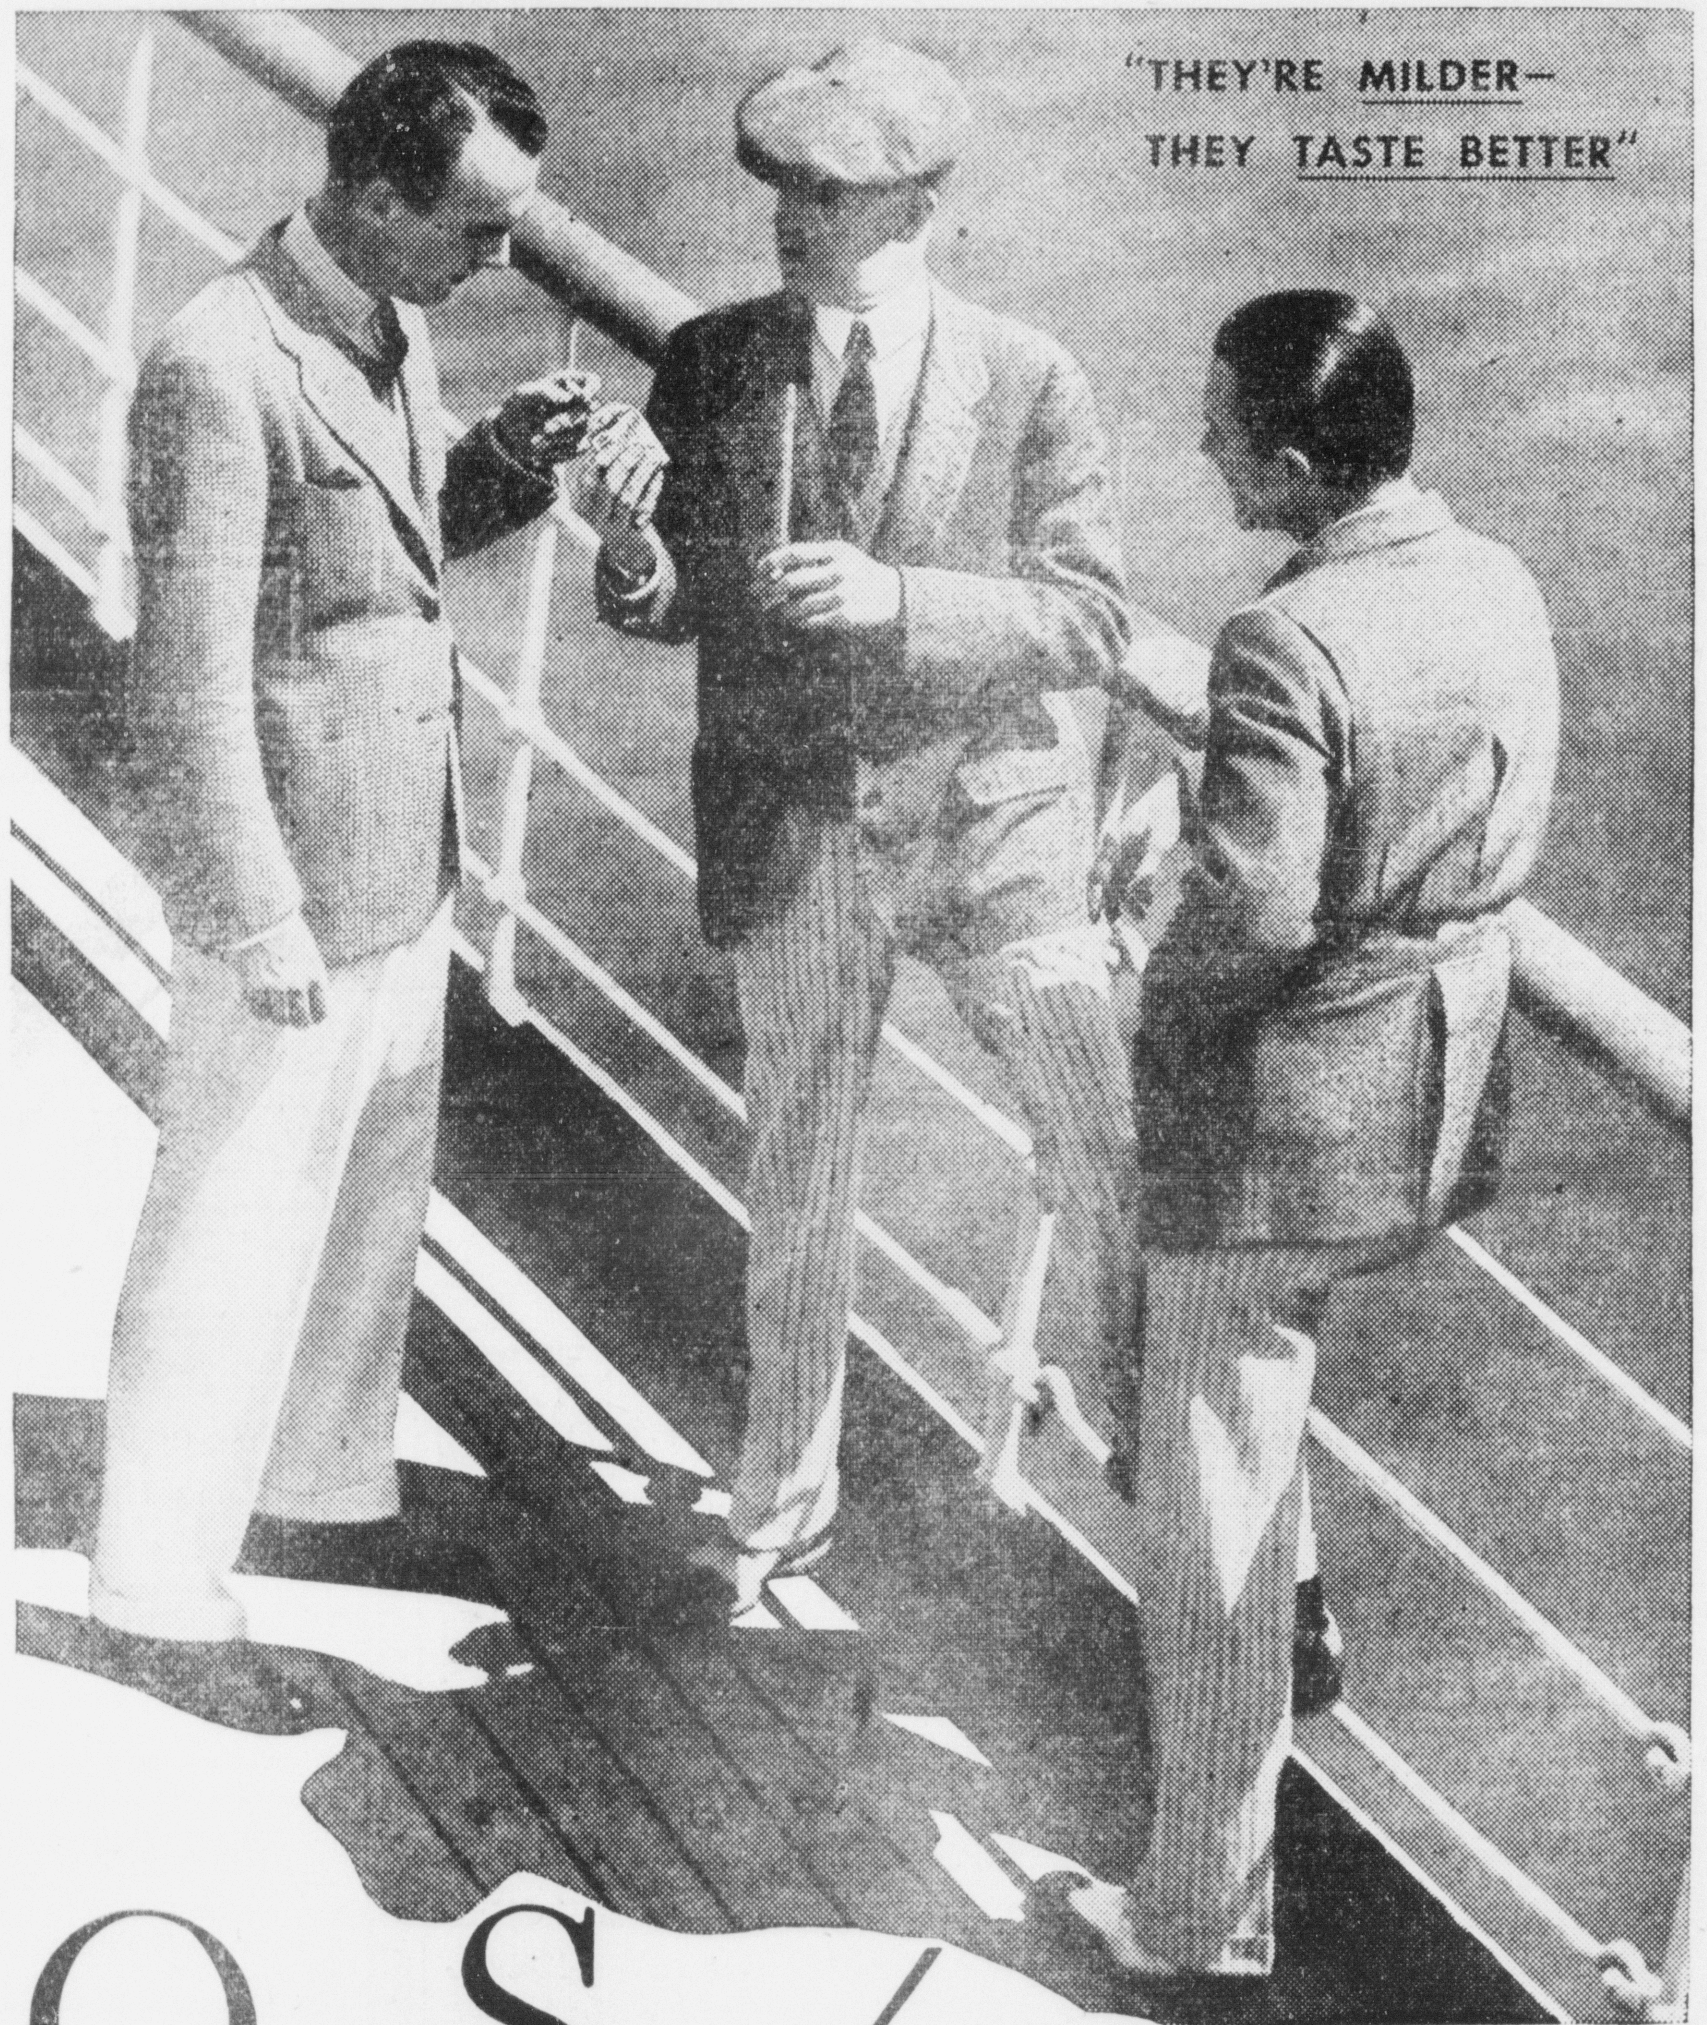

What a crowd should be on hand when these two Italian gladiators face each other under the glare of the arc-lights at the mammoth bowl in Long Island City, N. Y.!

This fight is certain to be a terrific slugfest, since Petrolle is a kayo puncher, and Canzoneri is always willing to trade wallops.

There won't be any repetition of the last two McLarnin-Petrolle bouts, which lacked thrills because the Vancouver Irishman refused to slug it out with the murderous-punching Fargo man, being content to box his way carefully to a decision win.

Canzoneri couldn't fight THAT way if he tried. He always punches it out with his opponents, no matter how hard they can sock!

"THEY'RE Milder—
THEY TASTE BETTER"

One Smoker tells ANOTHER

WHEREVER you buy CHESTERFIELDS on land or on sea, you get them just as fresh as if you came by our factory door—have one if you will. I think you will find that they are milder—that they taste better.

I have noticed that CHESTERFIELDS are made right—not hard and soft; no flabby cigarettes—each one well-filled. They are the right size to smoke cool and comfortable.
